

ANNUAL JUNIOR
WEEK TO BE HELD
AT U K JUNE 8-13

More Than 500 Students from 80 Kentucky Counties
Expected to Attend

GOVERNOR SAMPSON
TO ADDRESS MEETING

Clyde Reeves, University
Freshman, Is President of
4-H Clubs of State

The eleventh annual Junior week will be held at the university June 8-13, according to announcements released from the office of J. W. Whitehouse, head of 4-H club work in Kentucky. More than 500 students from 80 counties of the state are expected to attend. The president of the state 4-H clubs is Clyde Reeves, a student in the freshman class at the university.

Program plans released by Mr. Whitehouse include an address by Governor Sampson, Thursday, June 12. Other speakers who are expected to attend the meeting are Prof. Frank Smith of Berea, who will conduct a short course in dramatics; Prof. H. E. Taylor of Berea, who will give an organ recital; and W. Morris Westwood, nationally known song leader, who will lead inspirational meetings. Dean Cooper of the Agriculture College will deliver an address of welcome.

A feature of the week will be the annual health contest. Each county is allowed one boy and one girl contestant and the winner is judged to be the healthiest 4-H club member in Kentucky. Last year the winner in the boys' division was Duke Pettit, a student in the Agricultural College, who was within 3 of a point of being the national health champion. The winner in the girls' division was Allaine Hill of Scott county.

Sixty demonstration teams are expected to attend and the use of farm implements and the proper methods for conducting a kitchen and dining room will be shown by the various teams. The girls attending will conduct a style show and the dresses worn will be the products of the weavers.

More than 100 of the delegates attending receive the trip as a prize for excellent work done during the year in the home county. The trip is the gift of the Louisville and Nashville railroad.

Prizes totaling $600 will be distributed to the winners of contests and have been donated by the Stewart Dry Goods company of Louisville and the Cosmo Portland Cement company. Winners of the contests will also go to Chicago next December and represent Kentucky in the national contests held in that city.

According to Mr. Whitehouse, the mornings of Junior week will be devoted to a school which the university will conduct for the visitors. The afternoons will be given over to meetings. The climax of the week will be a trip to Frankfort, where the Governor will hold a reception in the executive mansion.

TWO U. K. CO-EDS
WIN ESSAY PRIZES

Mary E. Adair and Lois Purcell Are Awarded Medals in National Collegiate Contest

Two university co-eds were winners of prizes in the national collegiate essay contest conducted recently by the American committee to the International Colonial and Overseas Exposition in Paris, France. May 10 to October, it was revealed in a letter received yesterday by Dean Paul P. Boyd from Armond Steyer, general secretary of the French Chamber of Commerce in New York. Mary Eunice Adair, Lexington, junior in the College of Agriculture, won a gold medal, and Lois Purcell, Paducah, was winner of a silver medal in the contest, with essays on "French Influences on United States Civilization and Culture."

Mary Adair is a member of the Home Economics club and Agricultural club and was a member of the Junior club. In 1927 Miss Adair was a member of the championship team of the Home Demonstration contest, in connection with Junior week. She is a graduate of Linlee High school.

Miss Purcell, who is a major in the department of journalism, has won three other essay prizes while a student at the university and at Tighman High school, Paducah. In 1921 she won first prize in a contest sponsored by the United Daughters of the Confederacy. The subject was "Historic Sons of the South." In 1924 she was the winner in the McCracken county division of a contest conducted in connection with the Harrodsburg centennial celebration, and in 1928 she took first honors with an essay on "Influences of Kentucky and Kentuckians on the History of Missouri," in a contest sponsored by the Kentucky Society of St. Louis.

Miss Purcell is vice-president of Theta Sigma Phi, national journalistic fraternity for women, a former associate editor of The Kernel, feature writer on the Paducah Sun-Democrat, and last year conducted the Lexington Herald column on the Lexington Herald. Wildcat Thinlie Stars Complete
One of Most Successful Seasons
In History of Track at University

By J. D. ADAMS

One of the most successful seasons which the Wildcat track team has ever enjoyed has been recently brought to a close. The 'Cats went through the season undefeated and scored 380 and one-half to the 221 and one-half for their opponents, and to top all other achievements they scored 12 points to take eighth place in the Southern Conference track meet at Birmingham, placing higher than any other team of Wildcats ever have.

Defeating the University of Louisville, Vanderbilt, Tennessee, Sewanee, and Cincinnati in order by decisive scores, Coach Shively's men showed the best balanced track team to represent the university in this sport for several years.

Led by Co-captain Shipwreck Kelly, who ran the century in 9.9, the 'Cat sprinters defeated all opposition. Kelly won every 100-yard race in which he participated, and Hieber placed second in all but one, winning the first race of the season against the University of Louisville. Both of these boys have worked hard and deserve great credit for Brethren! Sisters!

PAN POLITIKON

Student Organization for Studying International Relations Formulates Plans for Year 1931-32

Pan Politikon, student organization for the purpose of studying international relations at the university, has chosen for its executive committee for next year George Yost, chairman, Chester Jolly, vice-chairman, and Emily Hardin, secretary. These new officers met with the outgoing committee and the advisors, Dr. and Mrs. Frank L. McVey and Prof. E. F. Farquhar, at dinner Wednesday night at Maxwell Place, to discuss plans for the coming year.

The group decided to study the Scandinavian peninsula next year, devoting the fall months to a development of the background of the three countries, and the spring months to concentration on one of them. It is hoped by the members that the minister from Denmark may come to the university as the speaker in November, while a native of either Sweden or Norway will be obtained for March.

In addition these convocation speakers, the aid of the various departments and professors will be solicited in order to make the study universal on the campus, and to offer every phase of it to the student body. Any expression on the part of the students or the faculty as to which of the countries they are most interested in and would prefer to have dealt with in the spring will be welcomed. Pan Politikon is an organization for and of the entire campus, the executive committee acting merely as a functional body to direct what is felt to be the student interest and need in the subject of foreign affairs.

During the four years of its existence, Pan Politikon has arranged for native speakers from each country it has considered, and the range of its study has been from Canada to China, from Italy to South America, from Mexico to Russia.

Approximately 235 athletes representing five sororities will take part in the intramural carnival which will be held at 1:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon on Stoll field. The carnival will be held under the auspices of the Intramural department and the women's physical education department.

This is the first intramural event of its kind at the university. If it is a success this year, it will become an annual custom. Sororities have solicited the services of men students to run in the individual races. Young women will also compete in the races.

Seven houses have signified their intentions of participation in the field day. They include the Kappa Delta, Kappa Kappa Gamma, Alpha Delta Theta, Delta Zeta, Alpha Gamma Delta, and Chi Omega sororities.

The different sororities have solicited men athletes who are not representing the university on varsity teams to run for their organizations. Whatever points these men score will be tallied to the final score which the sororities will make through the girls' participation in the races.

The rules follow:
There is no entry fee.
Each organization can enter only one man in each event.
No man can take part in more than one event.

Letter men in track are barred from competition as well as those attached to the freshman or varsity squad after April 25.

NICHOLLS PLANS
EUROPEAN TOUR

Professor in College of Agriculture Will Leave July 18 to Study Farm Conditions in England, and Continent

Dr. W. D. Nicholls of the College of Agriculture is planning a summer trip to Europe where he will make an extensive study of farm conditions. He will be accompanied by his son William H. Nicholls, freshman in the Agriculture College.

Doctor Nicholls will leave this country about July 18 and will return September 1. Southern Germany, Austria, Switzerland, and Denmark will be visited during the tour.

In southern Germany the famed agricultural villages will be studied. There German peasants live and have their houses but their farms are located some distance from the village. Their plan of operation will be carefully studied. Here as in Austria much of the land is devoted to forest and wood lots are managed so that a continual supply of timber is available. These methods will be investigated, according to Doctor Nicholls' plans.

Terracing of steep mountain slopes in Switzerland in order that farming may be possible will be the object of study while in the Alps. In Denmark the cooperative method of manufacturing and selling dairy products will occupy much of Doctor Nicholls' time.

This tour is expected to aid the experiment station in its work among the rural residents of Kentucky. Some of the more successful plans discovered in Europe may be introduced to the farmers of this state.

USEFUL LIFE CLOSES

The Kernel joins those who mourn the loss of Mr. A. J. Zimmerman, instructor in General Chemistry, who died suddenly Wednesday night after an operation.

Professor Zimmerman was a member of the department of chemistry, in which field of work he also held a Masters Degree received here in 1927. Few men on the campus had gained a more permanent grasp on the interest and affection of the student body than he. The Kernel makes bold to predict that it will be difficult to fill the place made vacant by his untimely death.

Professor Zimmerman had attained an enviable position in his chosen field. He was graduated by the university in 1918, served with the Hercules Powder Company during the World War, entered the Illinois department of agriculture in 1922 and nine years ago became a member of the teaching staff in the department of Chemistry. In all these connections he served faithfully and with distinguished ability and gave promise of still more fruitful years of service. The Kernel desires to add its sympathy to that of his many friends, parents, bereaved wife and young son who survive him.

CO-EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS

There has arisen recently a school of bespectacled "education" enthusiasts who openly oppose the strictly American system of co-education. Sentiment seems to be that boys and girls do not take college life seriously when they are allowed to intermingle and exchange their ideas. Social life plays too important a role in the life of students who are allowed to enjoy companionship of the opposite sex.

It is true that a survey of co-educational institutions would reveal that many students, both boys and girls, come to college with the sole ideal of joining a sorority or fraternity and taking part in the social whirl with the ultimate desire of social success or the selection of a life companion. This phase of college life is strictly absent from girls' institutions or boys' schools.

Life in a school like Mississippi A. and M. College is regimented. While this institution may not be a good example of a strictly male institution, it will indicate some phases that are characteristic of school life without the companionship or presence of Betty Co-ed. There are teeming throngs of boys between class hours. All have a matter-of-fact mien. Greetings lack the refinement that is most assuredly present in the presence of girls. There seems to be an atmosphere entirely masculine—something which reminds one of a military camp. Girls are thought of as members of an outside world and their letters seem to be messages from afar.

Life, after college releases the young man, is not strictly masculine. Nor is there a tendency to group the sexes together. Constant association with each other gives the boy or girl poise which can only be attained by long association in each other's presence.

It is said that in co-educational institutions there is a lack of earnestness and loss of time due to too much social activity. This is true to some extent, but on the other hand there are "sessions" in those other schools in which the date must be smuggled in through the up-stairs window.

Co-education is broad. It is based upon that phase of life which is natural and is not devoid of the "lags" and shortcomings of ordinary life. But after all there will be an opportunity for experimentation after the old diploma has been signed. Maybe there will be some things that Betty Co-ed has learned or has taught her pal which will be beneficial in later life. Or will it continue to be a life as described by modern critics as being a mere puff or bubble floating on the happiness which comes through companionship and disregards the hard knocks altogether.

HONORARY DEGREES

Will Rogers, "the most popular man in America," recently refused an honorary degree which educators sought to confer. Rogers said that such degrees were already a joke because they had been conferred on many persons who did not deserve them and that he did not propose to take a degree without working for it when other persons spent their lives to obtain it.

The people of American always have been noted for their hero worship, whether their hero be an aviator, a humorist, a scientist or an architect, but their admiration for a man who excels in some particular line should not be carried to the point where they confer on him honorary degrees which he has not earned and which in no way are related to his field of activity. A degree should be the reward of study, it should not be received in any other way. If a person has studied in a particular field and has contributed a great deal to the knowledge of his subject he deserves a degree, whether or not he has fulfilled a prescribed course of study, but he most certainly does not deserve a degree in a field with which he is unfamiliar and in which he has done nothing outstanding.

It would be well if more of the ladies and gentlemen who are the recipients of honorary degrees would take the attitude of Will Rogers, but since it hardly can be expected that they will, the movement for curtailing the conferring of such rewards should be inaugurated by the educational institutions themselves. Often a degree is awarded to a famous person in order to attract attention and publicity to the institution conferring the degree. Those institutions which are endeavoring to conform to present standards of ballyhoo find in this method of rewarding outstanding men an unusually subtle but nevertheless effective method of advertising themselves. We do not believe that honorary degrees should be abolished but we do believe that they should be awarded with a great deal more care and consideration than has attended their presentation in the past.

TO KEEP THE FAILING STUDENTS

A peculiar case involving long established customs in college attendance, was recently brought to attention in an Ohio university. This university, following its general ruling, dismissed a girl student from its roll because she had failed to make her grades, just as thousands of other students have failed and been dismissed. But this time the student's parents objected. The girl's father maintained that the girl had a right to remain in school as long as her expenses were properly paid and added that he would like to see them kick her out. The university refused to keep the student and accordingly the parent brought the case before the court. The judge of the court upheld the parent's objection and ruled that the girl had a perfect right to stay, and to take what she paid for.

Much controversy has arisen over the wisdom and advisability of this judgment. It seems that college professors and executives all over the country have taken arms either for or against the question. It is admitted, also, that either side may be right. That college students fail for one of three reasons, has long been a recognized fact. Lack of mental equipment, lack of time to devote to studies when one is working outside of school, and lack of interest in scholastic matter are the chief things responsible for failure to maintain a credible standing. If the student does not have sufficient mentality to enable him to keep up with other students, he has no place in college and would be much better off at home, in a simple business, or in another institution where special attention could be given to his deficiencies. If his outside work requires so much attention that his studies suffer he should quit one or the other; and if he has to work to remain in school, he should work and go to school alternate years instead of expecting the university authorities to make allowances for his ambition and pass him when he does not deserve to be passed. If he is going to school just for the good times there are in it (or outside of it rather), he had better desert school entirely and devote all his time to the pursuit of pleasure instead of wasting his parents' money and the university's time.

However, the unassailable privilege of spending his money where and when he pleases remains for everyone. If a worried parent desires to tuck his wayward daughter away in a college where she will be required to attend classes once in awhile and where she might accidentally absorb something, his right to do this should not be curtailed. That is what colleges are for and he has a right to do what he wants to with his children and his money.

The case cited is only one phase of the matter. The principal of the thing boils down briefly to the question of keeping the failing, useless, inefficient or lazy parasites in our colleges just because their parents want to keep them there. To us it seems that anyone who examines the proposition, impartially and in detail, must inevitably come to the conclusion that colleges have as much right to use their time as they choose as parents do their money, and that waste matter must be eliminated.

SOMETHING NEW

Ohio State University has been conducting an examination of the professors by the students of the university. This is not a similar test to those given in several of the larger eastern colleges measuring the popularity of the instructors, the quality of lectures which they present, their apparent scope of the subject matter which they teach, their ability to interest a class, their sense of humor, and their technique of teaching.

Some of the professors have inadvertently suggested that a similar method be used in their classes. Several faculty members have asked that their students submit criticisms of their class, regarding its contents and the method of teaching used and containing any suggestions which they might have to offer.

This suggestion was the result of the faculty meetings which have been held every Monday evening with the purpose in view of encouraging better teaching methods. In connection with these meetings The Kernel suggested, a short time ago, that the student angle be taken into consideration. As a result an open meeting was held and, any student desiring to attend was invited, to give the students an opportunity to visit and observe their work. The attitude of the university instructors seems to have broadened considerably under the influence of these meetings.

It is seldom that a faculty member will allow any class member to voice any opinion about the course, the method of teaching and examining, or about the attitude of the professor. This is a narrow point of view to take, for often students have ideas which would be valuable to the professor from the angle that if they were applied the course in question would benefit and so would the class. Furthermore, philosophers have said that the keenest of critics was a young mind and this has been found to be fairly true. Young people are critical, but their criticisms usually take the trend of suggesting that they wish that some specific change be made. In this way their criticism is constructive. Then there is the fact that students are subjected to all methods of teaching and should have as broad an understanding of them as the instructors, for it is seldom that one professor visits another professor's room to see just how he is conducting his classes. If this were so, there would be fewer uninteresting classes.

We think that it would be an interesting experience for Kentucky to try a similar experiment. It would fit in with the program which has been carried on for the improvement of teaching conditions. It should give a comprehensive understanding of the weak and strong points of the existing method. Some definite scale to work from should result. A definitely workable scale should result which would greatly increase the understanding of the working situation. This would be beneficial to both faculty and to students, for it would create an atmosphere of understanding and an attitude of cooperation which does not exist at present.

LITERARY SECTION

UNROMANTIC ENDING

Well, you are gone, and the dawn has come,
And the earth goes on as before—
The world didn't end as I thought it would,
Though you'll never be back anymore.
I said "So long," but I thought at the time
That things couldn't happen like that.
The world should have ended in fire by rights
'Cause you've gone, and you'll never come back.
But it didn't, my dear, and there wasn't a sign
Of thunder and lightning and such—
You went away and you didn't look back
And, darling, I love you so much!
You should have been sad, and gone with a tear
While the world blew up with a roar—
But the only noise that I could hear
Was the bang of a well-slammed door.
What if I did start the argument, dear,
Couldn't you see it was all just talk?
But even at that I could bear it all—
If you hadn't gone whistling down my walk!

A co-ed at the University of Chicago received a paper back from a professor with a comment written on it which she could not read. After failing to find anybody who could read it she took it in desperation back to the professor who had returned it to her. The comment was, "Please try to improve your writing. It is like that of a 12-year old child."

Permission to smoke in their rooms has been granted the co-eds at Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio, with the provision that they rent fire-extinguishers from the school's maintenance department to protect the dormitories.

A scotter contest was held at Ohio University, Athens, Ohio, recently. Thirty-seven events were scheduled for the affair. Ohio U. also had a collegiate silver race not long ago, too.

There are libraries—and libraries, according to the University of Wyoming Branding Iron, and the Wyoming library is rather more of an "unofficial matrimonial bureau" than a place to study. Spring is blamed mainly for the library's status as an "unsurpassed date bureau," and congratulations are offered to the few who actually manage to study.

These student elections are becoming bigger and bigger. The University of Kansas and the University of Southern California papers run advertisements for the candidates, the parties being organized elaborately. And now comes the news that at the University of Colorado violence of politics is threatening to abolish all student government. Rotten eggs and "unbeautiful cabbage" were used extensively and the members of the three parties painted their names on the entrances to many buildings. It has even been necessary to appoint a commission to restore peace and bring the culprits to justice, after the manner of national officials in mob violence.

NOTES ON CAMPING

Every fall students of the university return with vivid descriptions of their stay at river camps. Word pictures of their dates—as they laid like fallen scarecrows seeking to acquire a tan, as they stirred their coffee with their forefingers, as they insisted on remaining to the very last day of camp—are portrayed in all their nauseating reality. In imitation of Vanity Fair's Notes on Marriage we respectfully submit the following notes on camping:

Necking
A minimum of necking is of primary importance if camp is to be at all bearable. Whether you think so or not, your date will after the first night or two.

When tiny flakes of silver float silently down the mysteriously black stream and the warm soft wind rustles romantically through the fresh greenness of overhanging trees do not kiss her too often. She might believe you like her. And incidentally—bacio di bocca spesso cur non tocca.

If you find her in the arms of your best friend light two murads—one for each of them.

Kiss her goodbye the first night—you will not be able to the last night.

Make the Picnaps your pals if your technique is good—they may permit you to enter their necking competition.

Late Dates
Encourage her to have late dates—then she may not want you to take her swimming so early in the morning.

Do not make late dates with the ladies on the Triangle camp. When she comes to breakfast with deep, dark crescents under the eyes you once thought were beautiful suggest a long hike up the river.

Enamored
When you feel that you will smile sweetly and tell her that she is the best date on the river. If you can do this without gagging then you never will know what real boredom is.

Have your hair cut very short. This will keep you from tearing it all out when she says for the thousandth time, "You really were a dear to bring me to camp."

The only trouble with pretending to sleep when she bores you is that you cannot pretend for more than five or six hours.

If you take a Kappa you are sure to be bored, but so will the Kappa.

Conversation
Never try to be clever. It is only by your intended boss mate that she can be sure of your betise.

To your date the moon always will be, "beautiful," the water, "delightful," and the mugg who sits next to her, "The funniest person I have ever met."

Do not tell risque stories to your date—she probably heard them all before she was born.

Confine dinner conversation to, "Will you have sugar," and "Pass the beans, pal."

If you are an S. A. E., much conversation can be made about the 15 buck parking on Sigol cars by the Alfisigs across the river.

Maxims
It is easier to find a good wife than a good camp date because good camp dates do not exist.

If you want to marry someone take her to camp. You no longer will want to marry her.

Do not blame her for being stupid. Blame yourself for not believing what we are telling you.

The greatest joy of camp is that which comes with the time of departure.

The desire to camp proves that the barbarian and the collegian are one and the same person.

LEE WAS FATHER OF JOURNALISM

Confederate General Revealed as Sponsor of First School of Journalism in W. and L.

General Robert E. Lee was the father of schools of journalism as well as hero of the Southern Confederacy, according to Dean Clarence S. Marsh, of the University of Buffalo evening session, in addressing a dinner group of a class in essay and editorial writing.

At the close of the Civil War, General Lee rejected many offers of military and civil posts, ranging from supreme command of the Egyptian army to the presidency of a large life insurance company, to become President of Washington College (now Washington and Lee University), Lexington, Va. The college was bankrupt and had suspended operations during the war. With only 52 students and five instructors, General Lee undertook three daring innovations in curriculum, Dean Marsh said. First, he introduced the elective system, paralleling Dr. Eliot's revolutionary experiment about the same time on a larger scale at Harvard. Second, he founded America's first collegiate school of business. Third, he sponsored the first school of journalism in the world.

General Lee's school of journalism was in a simple setting—the little office of Lexington's sole newspaper. The editor was a close friend of the General and in sympathy with the Confederate commander's belief that Southern colleges ought to train competent journalists to carry forward the task of reconstruction. So the newspaper proprietor endowed free scholarships for students who wished to learn the newspaper profession within his office. In time, 50 scholarships were made available, the students working in rotation at all the different tasks necessary to getting out a newspaper. The college gave them academic credit for the practical journalism course thus taken.

Wildcat Thinlies Complete Season

their earnest efforts. They will both be returning to the team next year and should be much improved over their form of this year. Kelly won every 220-yard dash in which he was entered in dual competition this year, and took a second in the conference meet at Birmingham last week.

The Big Blue was not as strong in the 440-yard dash as could have been desired, but managed to take several first places. Hays, Milliken and Foster were the best for the Blue and White in this event. A great crop of freshman quarter milers will be available for varsity competition next year, among whom are Bennett, Carter, and Wallace. "Jake" O'Bryant, ace of the Kentucky middle distance performers, won all of his starts in the mile run, and set a new university record of 4:35.4. In addition to his great efforts in dual competition, he placed fifth in the conference meet to gain the 12th Wildcat point. O'Bryant, in addition to his stellar work in the mile, turned in some fine work in the half-mile run. His strict training and hard work have gained him a niche in the Wildcat hall of fame. Saunders, the other Blue and White half-miler, did equally creditable work and won one race and placed second in one. Together these two men form a very creditable middle distance division and with the aid of new talent should be much improved next year.

Burruss, Big Blue sophomore two-miler won every race he entered, except one and lost by a very close margin. Burruss did exceptionally well for a new man and by next season, with his participation in cross-country next fall should be a finished runner. Baker, another distance man, is a sophomore and a good prospect for next year. He ran the mile and two miles for the Big Blue and took several second places.

The low-hurdles were well taken care of this year by Williams and Wieman, who are seniors, and material to take their places will be difficult to find. Williams and Wieman each won a race and both finished second twice. Blumer, freshman hurdler, seems the only prospect for next year.

Emmerich and Shipley took care of the high hurdles for Coach Shively's team this year and were successful in most of their starts. Emmerich, versatile sophomore hurdler, won three races, and placed second in one. He is the sole barrier jumper returning to the squad next year, and with the added experience may develop into one of the best hurdlers the university has ever had. Shipley, who is a senior, will be lost to the team next year, and his experience and prowess will be sadly missed.

The chief weaknesses of this year's Wildcat track squad was found in the field events. While much better in this department than in previous years, there is still much room for improvement. Kelly, in the broad jump, and Cavana, in the javelin throw added much added strength to the field department.

The pole vault was much better taken care of this year than last year. Turley and Hubbell, sophomores, added strength to the pole vault this year. Both have cleared more than 11 feet and six inches, and are improving rapidly. The boys did not win many events this year, but they gained the much needed experience and will give a fine account of themselves next year.

Kelly, the flashing blond from Springfield, showed the fans that he also can jump as well as sprint, and set a new record in the broad jump of 23 feet, five and three-quarter inches. Fred McLane also showed up well in the broad jump, getting a distance of well over 23 feet 10 inches. Kelly will be back next year and is expected by coach Shively to get much greater distances than he has achieved this year.

"Scaly" Roberts did good work in the high jump this season, almost equalling his former record mark of 6 feet, achieved while in high school. With his last year of competition facing him, Roberts will be trying to equal his former mark. Kelly will also high jump next year and will be almost as good as Roberts with a little experience.

The discus throw was a great disappointment this year, Tuttle being expected to win almost all of his events, but being handicapped by the fact that he was nervous and could not control his feet and often fouled. He has almost overcome this trouble and great improvement is looked for next year. Andrews will again be the steady dependable "Ken" always carrying on when the much publicized stars let down, he took several second places and one first. He threw both the discus and the shot.

Frank Seale, the ace shot topper, of this year's edition of the "Cats" is rapidly progressing and is expected to toss the iron ball at least 41 feet next year.

The relay team of the 'Cats did not have a large amount of success this year, but all the men composing it are sophomores and great things are expected of them for the ensuing year. They are F. Baker, Foster, Milliken, Hays, Parent and Skinner.

And last but far from least is the javelin throw. In this event,

The faculty in coaching and physical education includes experienced men from Kentucky, Illinois, Vanderbilt, Kansas, Alabama, Battle Creek College of Physical Education, and Transylvania.

Intra-Sorority Meet To Be Held Saturday

yards, thread needles held by the girls, and then run back to the starting point. Next will come the 220-yard dash for boys, after which a wheelbarrow race will be run, the boys trundling girls in wheelbarrows. The mile relay and the low hurdles, both for boys, will precede the final event, the shuttle race, in which teams of eight girls will take part.

"Big Bud" Cavana threw the spear 180 feet in practice and was undefeated in dual meets this year and took a fourth in the conference. Kelly and McLane also did well in this event.

Coach Shively should be given much credit for the time he has spent developing this fine organization. With the material he has coming up from the frosh an even better season will be had next year.

Speaking of professors, Ohio State has found the ideal one, who served tea and cookies to the students in his class after they had finished their exams.

The Muhl, magazine publication of Muhlenberg College, Allenton, Penn., is offering $100 in gold to the American college student who submits the most thought-provoking and constructive essay on "What's Wrong With Professors?" The Muhl editor has made the provision that essays will be debared if they are not constructive despite their frivolity.

The May issue of The LONDON MERCURY gives a number of pages to an appreciation of the late Arnold Bennett. I should say that the MERCURY'S estimate is very adequate and fair. For example, of Bennett it says: "He was unselfish and completely free from jealousy; and he was not one of those writers who hoard their best things for print. Any man he thought worthy of his friendship was likely to receive from him frequent, long and exquisitely written letters full of acute disquisitions, humor and neat phrases. He left a large hole in the world."

Use caution at street intersections, frequently visiting strangers are unacquainted with traffic regulations, and pass up stop signs unknowingly.

A reader suggests that the city purchase and operate a municipal golf course for its older boys and girls...and charge reasonable fees. He says that other cities are able to support their entire park system from the income derived from one or two such courses... A good idea worth considering.

It's all right to begin at the bottom, that is, if you are not learning to swim.

We have received two new numbers in Bathing Caps, that are really nifty.

Freddie Theobald, the Stewart Warner specialist, says: There are so many automatic devices for the home right now that any bride can go right to housekeeping, provided she is electrical engineer, or a master mechanic.

Just a little shaving suggestion: Try

Lawrence after a close shave. You'll say it's great!

Be nonchalant—eat a sweet—walk a mile—smoke a Lucky, and you'll be surprised what a difference a little caffeine exercise makes.
